Saturday being Herbert Pratt's 67th birthday anniversary, a few friends and relatives presented him with two sums of money, the aggregate representing a dollar for each year of his life. A very pleasant feature of the day was a telegram from Rev. C. O. Day of Boston with best wishes, etc., also a call from Rev. Mr. Miles. A few friends called in the evening. It was all a complete surprise to Mr. Pratt, who is deeply grateful to all, both far and near, who so kindly remembered him.

Prof. Williston Walker and Mrs. Walker of Hartford were in the Massasoit a part of yesterday, and while stopping in the city, Prof. Walker, who is well known in Western Massachusetts, as one of the energetic trustees of Amherst college, took occasion to express his pleasure at the outlook for Amherst this coming year. He believes that under the presidency of Dr. Geo. Harris of Andover the college will progress even better than in the past. Prof. Walker was one of the trustees who strongly advocated the choice of the Andover president. Incidentally, he quickly frowned upon any mention which was made from time to time of the fact that he, himself, would prove a good choice for the college. At one time Prof. Walker was being quite persistently "considered." (Springfield Union of Saturday.)

GRANGE NEWS.

The Pomona Grange Meeting at West Halifax Yesterday.

Windham County Pomona met with Guiding Star grange, West Halifax, Thursday. In the morning the attendance was small. The question on the order of business was considered. "How best to keep up the fertility of the soil." The beautiful dinner was served in the large tent erected for the occasion. The program included prayer by Elder Smith; song by Guiding Star grange; welcome by Master E. S. Cook and the able and thoughtful response by F. H. Putnam of North River grange; reading, Mrs. A. J. Faulkner; reading, Mrs. W. C. Siles; recitation by Maud and Grace Thurber; Gertrude Whitney; Elsie Larrabee and Alberta Drummond; declamation, Albert Larrabee; selection by Mrs. Stacy; question, "In what respect are the farmers' boys today better fitted for the future than those of a generation ago?" There was a good attendance in the afternoon and a pleasant day for all that were there.

Seventy-seven cases of yellow fever have been reported up to last night at Key West, with a total of seven deaths to date. Thirteen cases were reported yesterday. The disease is slowly advancing. The prospects for stamping out the fever are not very encouraging.

What Lincoln Said.

[From the Brooklyn Eagle.]

Here are some things Abraham Lincoln said: "He who stands by and says nothing when the peril of his government is discussed, cannot be misunderstood. He is sure to help the enemy." And this: "You come to me and ask for peace on any terms, and yet have no word of condemnation for those making war upon us. There is no Washington in that, no Jackson in that. There is no manhood or honor in that." Neither what Washington said nor what Lincoln said should tie up American action generations after their death. But what Lincoln did say, as given, has a strong lesson in it for those who are saying the same things to McKinley now—and quoting Lincoln in their favor.

SELLING TOMBSTONES.

A Former Wilmington Boy Tells a Springfield Union Reporter Some Amusing Experiences.

"You would have lots of good long laughs if you traveled around with me selling tombstones in the rural districts," said O. R. Buell of Rutland, Vt., in the Hotel Gilmore, last evening. "I am continually traveling through New England and the Middle States, and while my business is supposed to have its distinctly somber side, many a ludicrous happening comes my way."

"Now, it was only a little while ago, that, when in a small Connecticut village, I was really startled by the request of an intending customer. In the sitting room were grouped various members of the family, and, of course, they all had a hand in the important matter of selecting a suitable stone. The mother of the dead little one explained that, as her child had been of a particularly sweet nature, she wished a pretty little verse carved on the stone. She would not listen to my mild expostulation that such things are hardly in style nowadays."

"What I want is this," she said: 'Don't cry little one, little Johnny has only gone to Jesus.' Then to make matters worse, she said the verse must be written in child-talk. The little had to be spelled 'tillie, and so on. I had to give in and ordered that stone just as she requested."

"While out in New York state a few months ago I ran across a rather new stone, which bore an inscription that plainly told that the weeping husband must have had some lingering quarrel against Wife No. 1. Here is what I read:

"Regardless of cost and regardless of pains, this stone was erected to mark the demise of Wife No. 1 of E. Michael O'Rourke, and Wife No. 2 will help pay for the stone."

"One day a middle-aged man came into our office with a bundle of manuscripts as big as my wrist. He wanted it all put on the stone. He was sent away with advice to pare it down, and three times he alighted as he slashed his production, until finally he would shorten it no further. Even then the epitaph completely covered both sides of the big stone, in small letters. He probably thought he got square with the company by having his epitaph end with this:

"A cheap stone with something on it which may comfort the mourner and be a lasting benefit to mankind." (Springfield, Mass., Union of Sept. 2.)

Ten buildings were burned yesterday at North Stratford, N. H., including the Percy House, the largest building in the village. Help was summoned from Island Pond. The loss is $55,000.
